

A Glimpse Into The Future KUTS Station Concept Workshop

"Design creates culture. Culture shapes values. Values determine the future."

- Robert L. Peters

Thursday, 9 June 2021, Kuching – The Kuching Urban Transportation System (KUTS) team recently held a Station Concept workshop on one of the most fascinating aspects of the project – design of the stations. With a glimpse into the future of a more efficient public transportation system criss-crossing the city, Kuching residents have lots to be excited about.

The presentation on station design was led by an award-winning local design firm, Aki Media.

Apart from design of the stations, both at grade and on viaducts (elevated), other items discussed were infrastructure capacity, costs, functionality, safety, and the socio-economic impact on the local community along both lines of KUTS.

As with developing a new infrastructure project in urban areas with dense neighbourhoods and live traffic, the challenge of designing stations include meeting high standards of safety, convenience and practicality.

One of Sarawak's most ambitious and exciting projects, KUTS aims to provide a reliable transport system to spur productivity and economic growth.

As PMC for this exciting project, Maltimur will have a hand in realising our fellow Sarawakians' hope for a better home. Keep an eye out for more exciting developments on KUTS and NCH in future Connects!
